A message from the CHIEF ADMINISTRATOR

Dear friends,

Two years ago this month, we made our first donor visits for the capital campaign to renovate Wahlert Catholic High School. Though I knew much about the generosity of our community and its unfailing support for Catholic education, I was not alone in believing we had an uphill battle ahead of us to secure the $17 million necessary to transform the building into a premiere learning environment.

Fast forward two years, and I take great delight each time I walk the halls of my alma mater and see what has been made possible by the $17+ million we've raised. Immediately outside the Holy Family office, I can see the difference between what was and what is our new reality. That which has been renovated features LED lighting, making those areas incredibly bright, standing in stark contrast to the "dark side" of the cafeteria area that will be renovated next summer in the final phase of the project. We didn't know how much in the dark we were!

Take a few more steps and more of the progress becomes evident. Student favorites include the subway-tiled bathrooms, the three-story central staircase, the water-bottle fountains and, of course, the air conditioning. The science labs are both beautiful and functional, and classrooms boast carpeting, new furnishings and much natural light.

My favorite space surrounds the chapel, our Catholic identity center. The spiral staircase is gone, made redundant by the central stairs; a two-story crucifix will hang behind a glass wall in its place. Across the hall, we'll honor alumni who have pursued religious life in a vocations display.

From a Holy Family perspective, the success of the capital campaign and the renovation of Wahlert Catholic tells this community in no uncertain terms that Catholic education is here to stay in Dubuque. To all of you who made the incredible possible with your prayerful and generous support, I offer a humble and heartfelt thank you.

Sincerely,

Carol Schmidt Trueg (79)
Chief Administrator

Capital Campaign Update:

An inside perspective on renovations

*Luke Schaefer
Wahlert Catholic High School
Class of 2018*

When he first came back to Wahlert Catholic this fall, after many renovations had been completed, Wahlert junior Luke Schaefer's first reaction was "Wow! This looks nothing like the old school!" He had walked into a school that was much more modern and a vast improvement from what once was.

"The first day of school was different because it seemed as though I was walking around a completely different school. I wasn't walking around Wahlert anymore, I was walking around a much better looking school," Schaefer explained.

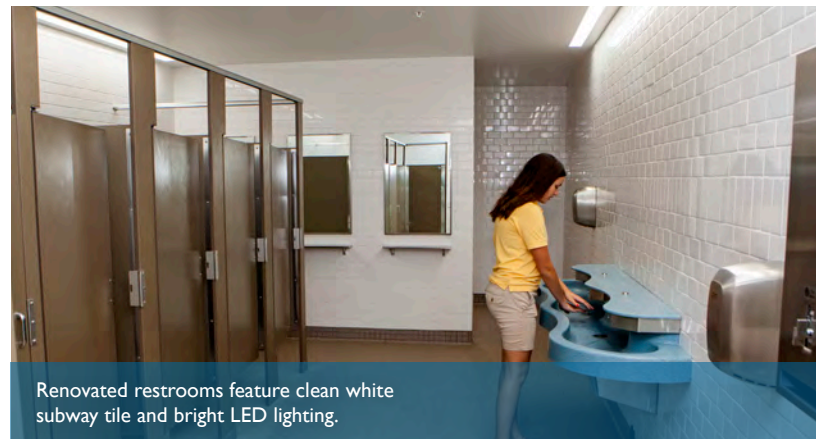

Schaefer says that the renovations, which have come about thanks to the Soaring capital campaign, have changed his view on his education at Wahlert Catholic, realizing the magnitude of community support these renovations required.

"All those people care about every single student's education," Schaefer said. "On behalf of the student body, I think I can say that we are all grateful for the renovations and all the support from everybody involved in the Wahlert community."

When asked what has been the most exciting part, Schaefer shares the same feeling as many students throughout the school: "The central staircase," he said. "It makes the school easier to access and now there isn't as much of a rush during passing periods to get to your next class!" Schaefer looks forward to the updated choir room, too. --

"Wow! This looks nothing like the old school!"

Renovated restrooms feature clean white subway tile and bright LED lighting.

Wahlert Catholic Principal Ron Meyers calls to memory Wahlert's rich tradition of excellence for the past 57 years. "Families sending their children here have expected to find a place where academic achievement is high and the development of the whole person is paramount to what we do. The faculty has been highly dedicated and passionate towards the duties we hold highest in a facility that was once new, but became worn over time."

Meyers points out that those expectations have never diminished, even as the building aged. "Wahlert's renovations have rejuvenated this culture and brought new pride and excitement to the community we serve."

In a comfortable and welcoming atmosphere, students and staff have a work environment that is supportive of learning and innovation. "Gone are the days when sweltering heat or frigid temperatures become the focus of the day," said Meyers.

Meyers witnesses the level of pride and high spirits demonstrated by students and faculty in the overall climate of the school as an indicator of success. He said: "Everyone seems to be happy and excited about the updates. They are taking care of the facilities, careful not to disrespect the building in any way."

"As far as facility improvements go, it is hard to pick out just one thing that is most exciting. I am however, amazed at what lighting will do to a building's character."

"I love watching and listening to students as new parts of the building are revealed. The bright lighting reflects well on their smiling faces."

When offering tours to prospective-student families, Meyers admits having previously developed a tour strategy that avoided facilities questions. "Now I need double the time to show them everything that has been accomplished and I can really focus on academic and activity programming,” he remarked.

Reflecting on the commitment made by our donors in such a quick time frame, Meyers feels that the response solidifies Holy Family’s importance to the Catholic community.

Finally, he shared his admiration for those who have dealt with the turmoil of construction over the past year: “I have been pleased with the patience, flexibility and investments made by our faculty and students. Living in construction while maintaining high productivity usually doesn’t go together. Those involved in the entire process have stepped up to the plate and have come up with the big hit that moves us ahead. However, the game isn’t over. See you next September.” --

Korrin Schriver has been teaching science at Wahlert Catholic for four years. She teaches three levels of biology to students ranging in age from freshmen to seniors in what is now a state-of-the-art high school science facility.

Schriver explained that during the renovations to the science wing, she was among the fortunate teachers who did not have to be displaced from her classroom.

She did, however, share her space with other teachers as things were in upheaval. They had to be creative about who could use the room when, and where one might find a quiet place to grade papers during prep hours.

Schriver’s first impression of her renovated classroom was how spacious it seemed. She says she loves the new lab space she has around the outside edge of the room.

“At first I was skeptical about the amount of cabinet space as it seemed like it was less than I had before, but once I moved in all my materials, I realized that it was actually more space,” said Schriver. “It was deceptive due to the space being spread throughout the room.”

Schriver describes the new environment as flexible. “The tables on wheels are great. I can create station activities more easily with the side lab tables and set up activities ahead of time without being worried that materials will be handled or moved by students. My room is also larger, so that makes creating groups easier, as they have more space to work.”

While the renovations have not changed the way Schriver teaches so far, she says things have become a lot easier to execute. She may change things up a bit when renovations are complete and there is green space available behind the building. --

Jeff Rusch
Director of Building and Grounds
Holy Family Catholic Schools

As Building and Grounds Director, Jeff Rusch oversees the logistics of the Soaring capital improvement project, serving as the intermediary for the system and the fleet of contractors who are working on renovations day in and day out.

It's Rusch's job to understand the project goals and timeline and meet the needs of construction crews to keep things moving.

"I'm here to answer questions, handle logistics, and deal with the unforeseen," said Rusch.

Speaking of the unforeseen, Rusch shared an example that came two weeks prior to summer vacation: "Work on the science labs was underway and we realized that the lab placement above the kitchen would mean asbestos abatement in the kitchen area sooner than we planned.

"Everyone rallied, rolled up their sleeves and asked 'what needs to be done?' As soon as school was out on the last day, we were in there clearing everything out of the kitchen," Rusch recalled. "On a positive note, it puts us a lot further ahead for next summer!"

Overall, Rusch assures that things have gone according to plan, with the first day of this school year the big target. Classrooms, bathrooms and the kitchen had to be ready. Rusch never had a doubt that goal would be met.

At this point, renovations are approximately 40 percent complete. So far, classrooms and new roofing are finished for the east wing. The theater, chapel, library, conference room and central stairway are also nearly finalized.

Mechanical updates have been a big part of the work done so far; new central heating and cooling systems replace the sixty-year-old boiler. There is also bright new lighting in the student parking lot.

So, what's left to be done? Work in the west wing will begin on December 1. The day school releases for summer, crews will continue work on the north end of that wing, cafeteria, gym lobby, bridge, and remaining roofing. This phase will also include new lighting for the O'Connor Activity Center and front parking lots. By the time students and faculty return in the fall, all major renovations will be done!

Cost-savings through energy efficiencies will be a major benefit of the project. "LED lighting is a big money-saver," commented Rusch. "Those efficiencies, including energy rebates, will help to defray some of the up-front costs that have been incurred with the project."

With all of the transformations, Rusch's favorite part is watching the reaction of students and teachers when they come in and see something new for the first time. "That's what it's all about. That's what drives us to get things done quickly and to do it right."

Rusch has appreciated working with the many vendors and construction crews involved with the project. "Almost all of them have a direct link to the school in some way, so they've gone above and beyond," Rusch noted. "The spirit of commitment is really touching. They all care about the success of this project and are taking pride in it."

ALUMNI SPOTLIGHT

What would inspire a group of high school students to participate in a grueling three-day relay across the state of Iowa? For members of the Wahlert Catholic men's cross country team, it was the opportunity to make a difference in the lives of children in South Africa through Relay Iowa, an initiative begun in 2010 by the late Jill Schrobilgen ('86) Raines and her husband Bill.

The Raines had visited Restoring Hope International, an orphanage in Welkom, South Africa. "Welkom was a gold mining town. The population there is 170,000, but it was once twice that size. There was a boom and a bust," Bill explained. "AIDS was so prevalent; they were pre-digging grave sites. When I got on the plane to come home, I thought 'there has got to be something we can do.'" The Raines wanted to do more than simply write a check.

Bill was aware of a local state champion cross country team that had recently undertaken a run across Iowa. It took them 35 hours. "So, I knew it could be done by serious athletes, but what about regular runners?" Bill wondered.

Bill and Jill, along with friends Scott and Lynn Rhein of Des Moines, began making plans for what has become the nation's only two-overnight run. The two couples would meet at the Raines' dinner table to plan the first event. They established the route with help from the Iowa Department of Transportation and set up a 501c3 to benefit Restoring Hope International.

They also created the structure for the event, including using a GPS monitor as the "baton" that is passed. The maximum team size is 12, but the number of runners is not important, says Bill. "We've had teams as small as four, and may even have a three-person team this year." Friends and family follow their team's progress, and the benefiting children in South Africa stay up to watch. Through a live feed, they cheer the runners on at the finish line.

The relay takes approximately 50 hours to complete. To run in Relay Iowa, Bill said you don't have to be a diehard athlete, but you should probably have a 10K under your belt. Although not a race, teams must plan to finish within a 60-hour window of time. Participants submit their running times and the Relay Iowa crew does their best to estimate how long the route will take them. Teams must average 10 minute and 20 second miles to complete the relay in the time allowed.

From the get-go, the Raines did not want this to be a race. "You wouldn't think people would take it so seriously, but teams want to run every step of this thing for the bragging rights ... Runners can be pretty competitive people. If you put someone in front of a runner, they're going to try to catch them!" Bill joked.

Runners can face 90-degree heat and inclement weather. They run on gravel roads and trafficked road-sides all day and all night. “It is a test, physically and mentally; you don’t get much sleep. By the time you reach Dubuque, we’re throwing hills in front of you that aren’t meant to be run, but the teams figure it out.”

In year one, there were four teams. The Raines invested $5,000 to make $2,500. “It would have been easier to write the check,” Bill admitted. But they kept at it.

Tragically, Jill was diagnosed with breast cancer three days after the inaugural 2010 Relay Iowa. “She was a key part of this project,” Bill pointed out. Even after her diagnosis, Jill felt it was important to keep Relay Iowa going.

For the next five years, Jill and Bill worked to build Relay Iowa. On June 8, just a few hours after the final 2015 team crossed the finish line, Jill’s hard-fought battle with cancer ended. From her bed at home, the Raines had been able to monitor the teams and were aware when all had completed the journey. Jill was hanging on to witness the last team finish. Bill says she simply smiled and said “good job.”

Jill’s siblings, (Greg [’82], Dan [’83] and Scott [’90]), the children of Dale and Bette Schrobilgen, along with their spouses all take part to coordinate Relay Iowa, and continue to serve as some of the primary operators of the event. Greg has run relay Iowa since its second year, and organizes teams from the Chicago area. He says his goal with the relay will always be to honor the memory of his sister.

Relay Iowa’s Wahlert Following

The Wahlert Catholic cross country connection to Relay Iowa came through Tom Fogel (’83), and his son Davis, a junior. Davis organized a group of his teammates – the Midnight Striders – to be among the 29 teams who completed the 2016 relay. “I think they found out they had more in them than they knew,” Tom said.

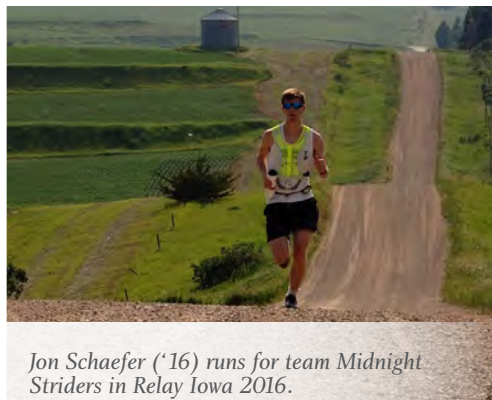

The relay’s power came into focus when the team arrived at the finish line in Dubuque. There to greet them were friends and other runners, as well as the live feed to the South African children their efforts were benefitting. Davis found the experience so worthwhile that he wants to build on it. “I hope to leverage that excitement and encourage more student teams to join next time, perhaps with three or four teams,” he said.

Relay Iowa, the longest relay of its kind in the world, has contributed more than $100,000 to the orphanage. Last year, $28,000 went to Restoring Hope International and $8,000 to local charities that helped to monitor check points along the route. Recently, Bill and his two daughters visited Welkom for the dedication of two new buildings, made possible by Relay Iowa contributions. One was named for Jill Raine, allowing the legacy she and her husband built to continue forever.

Registration for Relay Iowa 2017 is open now. If you have questions or would like to register a team, contact: jodi@relayia.org, or visit RelayIA.org.
